Founding Director, Online MA program in Political Science for Educators, Fall 2015 – Summer 2018.

- Responsible, with Carrie Manning and Sarah Gershon, for creating a new, fully online master's program in political science for educators, the first in Georgia and among the few nationally.
- Key tasks included designing the curriculum, moving the proposal through the approval process, marketing the program, and staffing the courses.
  - Presented on the program at the Georgia Council for the Social Studies Annual Meeting, October 2017.
- Also designed, with the assistance of the Center for Instructional Innovation and two graduate assistants (Rebekah Dowd and Adnan Rasool) the methods course for the program, the first online graduate course taught in the College of Arts and Sciences, Fall 2016.

Graduate Director (January 2010 – May 2012) – Recurring Activities

Was responsible for overseeing, in consultation with the chair and the graduate committee, all aspects of the department's MA and PhD programs (with about 110 students). About 15-30 hours per week. Specific tasks include:

- Overseeing and allocating the department's assistantship monies, a budget of nearly $400,000;
- Assisting incoming students to find funding for their graduate education;
- Supervising the performance and duties of graduate student instructors and research assistants;
- Assigning graduate research assistants to faculty and pairing new students with faculty advisors;
- Coordinating the admissions process and making admissions decisions, in consultation with the graduate committee and the college;
- Recruiting new students into the graduate program and responding to inquiries from prospective applicants;
- Serving as a central source of program advisement to our graduate students;

- Ensuring that the department's degree requirements are understood and enforced, and recommending changes to them when appropriate;
- Organizing comprehensive exams, including clearing students for the exams, assigning faculty to committees, and, in cooperation with the graduate secretary, setting the schedule for written and oral exams;
- Leading research colloquia for graduate students working on their theses and dissertations – eight two-hour sessions per year;
- Organizing other graduate student events, in consultation with the Graduate Student Association, including regular colloquia on comprehensive exam preparation and job placement and regular colloquia for graduate students presenting at upcoming conferences;
- Serving as faculty advisor to the Graduate Student Association;
- Coordinating the department's PhD placement activities and advising graduate students on the job market;
- Chairing the department's graduate committee;
- Serving as liaison with the college on matters relating to the graduate program and attending regular meetings of the college graduate council.
- Creating and implementing annual recruitment plans for our degree programs, as required by the university.

Graduate Director – Additional Activities and Accomplishments

- Oversaw the reform of our comprehensive exams, including an introduction of open notes and a change in the structure of oral exams.
- Oversaw the implementation of catalog changes to streamline our program: (1) a “C” minimum for degree credit, (2) the elimination of January intake into our MA program, and (3) the elimination of public administration as a major field, (4) the specification of rules for thesis and dissertation committee composition.
- Introduced the use of Embark and then Dobson's for graduate recruiting in political science.
- Purchased GRE scores to strengthen recruiting into the graduate program.
- With the assistance of the graduate committee, planned and organized a new recruitment and admissions calendar, along the department's first prospective student weekend.
- Implemented the new university “responsible conduct of research” training mandate for our graduate students, including the organization of regular seminars on research ethics.
- Along with the previous graduate director, presided over a dramatic expansion in the size of our doctoral program, with 14 new PhD students beginning in Fall 2010 (up from 7 in 2008), and more than 80 PhD applications for Fall 2012 (up from 36 in Fall 2008).
- Played a central role in the expansion of our methods course sequence from two to four courses.
- Oversaw an editing and expansion of the graduate program website, with new buttons such as “hire a PhD” and “testimonials from former students” as well as more information about faculty research.
